

Quince Dillion's High D

Allan Jabbour
[A Henry Reed Reunion]

This tune is often played with just the first two parts as popularized by the Fuzzy Mountain String Band. Henry Reed's son James plays "Quince Dillion's High-D Reel" with four parts and explains that his father used to play the two extra strains but had omitted them in the recording archived on the Library of Congress website.